Southern Alberta Suffers Great Loss In Hailstorm Swept Through Tues.

Place Loss Ranging From 10 to 100 Per Cent --- Fields Around Nanton Turned Into Lakes After Torrential Rains

Hail cut a wide swath more than 60 miles long through some of the richest crops in South Alberta late Tuesday afternoon, the storm extending from west of Okotoks through Azure, Cayley, Nanton, Ennis, Vulcan to to east of Champion and Carmangay, damage ranging from 10 to 100 per cent.

It was estimated Wednesday 6,000 acres in the Cayley district suffered 15 to 100 per cent loss, while about 40 per cent of the 12,000 acres hit in the Nanton Commemara territory sustained total loss.

Hail lay eight inches deep on the ground in some places, and in the Nanton district fields were turned into ice-covered lakes when a torrential rain followed the hail storm.

The Cayley and Azure district storm broke about 4 o'clock, and cut a path from northwest to southeast, varying greatly in width, and following the Squaw Coulee and Little Bow.

In the district round Cayley 6,000 acres carried loss from 15 to 100 per cent, the majority being close to 10 per cent. About two miles by to miles round Azure which is the elevator point north of Cayley took on average loss of 10 per cent. Numbers of farmers within this area figure a 50 per cent loss.

This storm cut into some of the good crops in the Cayley and Azure district which had promised a yield of about 20 bushels to the acre.

With the binders standing ready in the fields the crops were mowed down by nature with only small salvage left. Almost 15 feet of hail was piled against the buildings. Ditches ran with water, and such sloughs as have not been seen for years stood on the land.

A heavy rain was High River's share of the Tuesdays deluge.

Extends To Plainfield

The hail followed the Long Coulee district in the Champion district, much of the area hit was that which was frozen out by the July 18 frost, a year ago, and the loss is doubly hard on that account.

The hail reached as far as the Plainfield district east of Carmangay.

The hailstorm did from 10 to 100 per cent passing northeast of Nanton at 4 30 Tuesday afternoon.

A later survey of the hail damage would indicate that in the Nanton and Commemara districts about 12,000 acres were hailed, and about 40 per cent will have a total loss. In places the hail laid on the ground eight inches deep after the storm, which was accompanied by torrential rain, turning the fields into miniature ice covered lakes. Every ditch was a small river full of ice and water.

In the centre of the storm all grains and gardens were wiped out. Grain fields have the appearance of being mowed.

A hail storm following closely in the path of Monday's storm fell in the Vulcan district Tuesday

W. S. Lee Overturns Car Near Richdale

While motoring to Calgary last Saturday, Mr. W. S. Lee of Chinook had the misfortune to overturn his car on the highway about two miles west of Richdale when a tire blew out on the rear wheel causing it to skid.

All the occupants escaped with minor bruises and cuts except Mr. Fawcett of Regina, who recieved a deep cut on the bridge of his nose and stunned for a moment from an abrasion on his temple.

While considerable damage was done to the car, all were thankful they were not seriously injured.

Minister of Trade Commerce Says There Is No Necessity For Dictatorship

SASKATOON, Aug 7—Mark ets, the world wheat situation and the record of the Bennett government provided the bulk of an address here Monday night by Hon H. H. Stevens of Vancouver, federal minister of trade and commerce.

Introduced by F. R. MacMillan M. P., as the able chairman of the mass buying and price spreads Committee, Mr. Stevens made no comment on the workings of findings of that committee.

At the conclusion of his address when about to take a train for Edmonton, the minister had his attention called to the question of the mass buying probe by a note handed him. He declined to make any comment other than that he had no time.

The problems of government were detailed by the minister. He referred to the difficulties that faced every government, democratic or otherwise during trying times. All were being subject to critical scrutiny while evil influences were more prevalent in bad times than in good.

Canada, the speaker maintained was one of the most complete democracies in the world and in that position it was the duty of her people and government to safeguard personal liberty in government, in business and other contacts.

The cure of existing evils, generally to be found in selfishness and greed, must take place from the bottom up, from the inside out. There was no need for a dictatorship acting from the top down in this country.

Mr. Jas Guss of Kindersley is visiting at the home of his mother this week.

afternoon, a few crops still standing waiting for combines, were damaged but most of the other grain had been cut and total damage was not extensive.

A severe hail storm west of Okotoks destroyed a two-mile area of grain Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The Checkerboard And Peace

"Britain's frontier is now the Rhine." This statement, made in the British House of Commons by Stanley Baldwin while acting premier during the absence, in Canada, of Ramsay MacDonald, and used to epitomize his plea for extension of Britain's aerial fleets, thrust into vivid prominence the altered status of the mother country in regard to her European neighbors. Development of aircraft by continental powers has banished that security from hostile attack guaranteed heretofore by a powerful navy and the "chalk cliffs of Dover". Automatically, her frontier has been pushed outward step by step with the growth of foreign air armadas and the increasing range of potential enemy aeroplanes.

Synchronizing, as it did, with the disturbing sequence of events which preceded and followed the assassination of Chancellor Dollfus of Austria, the debate in the British House startlingly revealed the extent to which the atmosphere surrounding the European scene had been impregnated with fear of war. No wonder Britain's statesmen are perturbed; no wonder the chancelleries have been striving to secure some effective guarantees of territorial integrity among the storm-racked powers of Europe!

The fear of war can be traced directly to the militarization of Germany under Adolf Hitler, and the obvious ambition of the Nazis to extend the sphere of German influence until the Reich becomes dominant in European affairs. Prior to the Austrian embroglio, a concerted movement had been launched in Europe whose objective was (and is) effectively to curb Nazi ambitions of territorial expansion, west, east and south. The western frontier, marching with France and Belgium, had, of course, been "guaranteed" by the agreements concluded in the Locarno treaties of 1925. Germany, France, Belgium, Great Britain and Italy had agreed, individually and collectively, to guarantee the inviolability of the Franco-German and Belgo-German boundaries as defined by the Treaty of Versailles. There had also to be a complete demilitarization of German territory west of a line drawn east of the Rhine.

Agreements with respect to eastern boundaries, however, were not sanctified by as far-reaching commitments and mutual guarantees. It is true, there was a network of arbitration treaties involving Poland, Czechoslovakia, Germany and also France, but the Reich would not go so far as to accept as inviolate and permanent her eastern border. In fact, the hope has been cherished assiduously in Berlin that sooner or later there would come a revision of the German-Polish boundary which would restore Danzig and the Polish Corridor to the Reich. It is this rift in the lute of peace, diplomats of Europe are now seeking to close by means of what has become known as an "Eastern Locarno".

The "Eastern Locarno" pact now proposed calls for a mutual assistance agreement involving Russia, the Baltic States, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Germany, and would provide mutual guarantees of their respective frontiers and for mutual aid against an aggressor seeking to upset the status quo. As Germany is the only nation fundamentally opposed to the present territorial set-up, the real meaning of the "Eastern Locarno" is apparent.

The actual significance of the proposed treaty is that Nazi Germany's ambitions would indeed be curbed. If Berlin signs (and it has been put squarely up to Hitler), it would mean voluntary acceptance of her present boundaries, all around. It would mean definite renunciation of the Polish corridor and German claims to Upper Silesia. It would mean the stabilization of Europe in its present form. That apparently, is the key move to peace on the European checkerboard.

Apparently, too, "Locarno" is the formula of peace upon which European chancelleries pin their greatest faith. In addition to the "Eastern Locarno", a similar treaty, known as the "Southern Locarno", designed to preserve the Mediterranean status quo and involving, probably, Turkey, Italy, Greece and Yugoslavia, also is mooted.

Feminine Crusade Against Crime Started In United States

A feminine crusade against crime—designed to eliminate depredations of the Dillinger type—drew commendation from the United States department of justice.

The crusade has been given tremendous impetus recently by powerful women's organization.

"Women can play a most important part in the curbing of crime," said William Stanley, acting attorney-general.

"They can compare the form of government of their locality with the form in localities where not so many crimes are committed. We furnish them with a central bureau to furnish such information."

"If they find an unusual amount of crime, it is certainly indication that there can be improvement. They can demand improvement."

A Sunday school teacher of modernistic tendencies was telling his class that the miracles recorded in the Bible were not to be taken too literally. "My impression is . . .," said he. Then, by way of testing their knowledge of words, he asked, "Can any of you tell me what an impression is?" "Please, sir," said a shrill voice from the corner, "an impression is a dent in a soft spot."

Many Queer Ways Of Earning Living In India

Apparently, the West has not the sole monopoly of queer ways of earning a living, for the following extract is taken from the current Census Report, an official publication of the government of India, and shows that there are in India such odd professions as those practised by: Sellers of Grasshoppers, Pouters of Water on Gods, Averters of Hailstorms, Suckers of Bad Blood, Setters of Gold Nails in Teeth, Breakers of Dead Bullock Horns, Cradle Swingers, Professional Identifying Witnesses, Chessy Receivers on Burial Grounds, Drivers Away of Epidemics by Charms and Ear Wax Removers. In addition, the Census tables reveal that altogether there are 37,778 people earning their living as horoscope casters, astrologers, wizards, witches, mediums and fortune-tellers.

Hotels In Sahara Desert

Had To Be Taken By Camels In Small Parcels

As the French penetrate further and further southward into the Sahara, pacifying the roving Arab tribes as they go, hotels are being erected for the accommodation of government officials, visiting army officers, business men and the occasional venturesome tourist.

The hotels had to be taken south, through the desert, in parcels. Each parcel weighed about 200 lbs., and was one camel-load. Caravan after caravan, travelling 45 days through the sands, brought to Timimoun, in the far south of Algeria, the many tons of windows, doors, glass, china, linen, cutlery, furniture, electrical installation and other equipment needed for the local hotel.

Neither foremen nor European laborers would agree to go there, so the place was built by French army engineers, who themselves had to trace in the sand the first outline of the building because the superstitious wild Arabs of the region feared The Evil Eye, and would not have anything to do with blue-prints. They did consent to make the mud bricks, however, which form the walls, and to drag up to the site the date-palm trunks forming the roof beams and "girder-work."

The rest had to come in parcels. Even the ships of the desert bringing the parcels were temperamental. They would not travel on even good hard roads as were to be found along their line of route, but had to be steered over soft sandy courses. Camels suffer from bad spells of foot soreness unless allowed soft tracks.

Drouth In South Dakota

Guards Patrol Water Holes In Western Part Of State

Instead of fat cattle and bumper crops the water famine has brought gaunt beasts and meagre yields approaching a crop famine in South Dakota, the estimates of agricultural experts showed.

Already the federal government has sent $25,000,000 into South Dakota for drouth relief since September, 1932. This sum is exclusive of corn, hog and wheat benefits and cattle purchases. Yet debts exist, mortgages are held on cattle and land.

C. J. Borum, agricultural statistician of the state college of agriculture at Brookings, estimated winter wheat would run about 4.5 bushels to the acre. Forty-two thousand acres remain out of 296,000 acres which were planted.

Guards patrol water holes in the western part of the state. Drinking water is carted miles to be sold in some sections.

Japan Develops New Art

Sculptography, by means of which persons or objects may be photographed in solid form, has been developed in Japan. Sculptography's greatest contribution to science, according to its sponsors, is in replacing the human element in the making of sculptures where exact likeness is more important than the artistic element. Just as photography replaced painting for such purposes, so sculptography has replaced ordinary sculpturing.

Irish Free State Using Sweepstakes To Further Project

With $15,000,000 spent and an equal amount awaiting distribution, the Irish Free State hospitals envision an early day when they will be the envy of the working surgeons and medical research workers.

Ambitious plans for the permanent endowment of the hospitals of the country are being laid by the hospitals commission. The help of the League of Nations' health section has been invited so the commission can have the best advice at the laying of the foundations of the project. Twelve sweepstakes have already been held.

The hospitals commission, a body headed by Michael Doran, former chief European engineer for Henry Ford, controls the vast sums which have been painlessly raised in every corner of the globe and prevents haphazard extensions by existing hospitals so as to prevent waste and overlapping. While allowing sufficient cash to trickle out of the fund for current needs the commission is proceeding with its task of evolving a model hospital system for the Free State in which every institution will be co-ordinated with its neighbor.

Soviet Buying Arms

Newspaper Claims Shipments From England Gave To Russia

A London newspaper says that it is able to reveal that the record exportation of arms from Great Britain, amounting to £2,482,246, was due mainly to orders from Soviet Russia.

The arms consisted largely of machine guns and munitions. More than three-quarters of the total found their way to Russia.

The permission of Whitehall had to be secured for these large shipments.

The reason for these rush orders is that Russia is feverishly buying up the products of the world's armament factories in readiness for the struggle she believes is approaching with Japan.

The armaments business is phenomenally busy. Although the figures stand so high, they would have been much larger owing to insistent demands from Paraguay and Bolivia, but in these instances applications for licenses by the munitions manufacturers have been turned down by the foreign office.

Flags Raised Huge Sum

Kitchener Flag Collected $150,000 For World War Fund

Flags which raised hundreds of thousands of dollars for helpless soldiers and refugees during the World War have just been presented to the Australian government by Edward Solomon of Melbourne. They are to be hung near the National War Memorial at Canberra when it is completed. The most treasured relic in the collection is the Kitchener flag which alone raised $150,000. It is an Australian flag, which was sent nearly 200,000 miles and twice around the world to collect signatures. It was signed in the trenches by Joffre and Haig. A star from it was sent to Admiral Jellicoe, which he signed and returned for sewing into the flag. The autographs of the King and Queen were later added. Finally the flag was sent back to Australia where it was raffled in 1918.

Canada's Industrial Prairies

Report Shows Western Provinces Are Becoming Industrialized

Canada's prairie provinces—Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta—are rapidly becoming industrialized. While these provinces, often referred to as "The Bread Basket of the World", are famous for their output of agricultural products, at the same time manufacturing plays an important part.

According to a report issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, in 1932 the three prairie provinces manufactured goods with a selling value at the factory of $187,451,377. Establishments engaged in manufacturing numbered 2,687 and represented a capital investment of $354,450,263. These plants provided employment to 39,961 workers who received salaries and wages totalling $42,435,765. The value of materials purchased totalled $92,247,846 and the value added by manufacture amounted to $95,203,531.

Flour and feed mills led all industries with an output valued at $24,246,761. Slaughtering and meat packing followed with products worth $23,704,500. Other leading industries were butter and cheese to the value of $15,754,928, central electric stations $15,693,275; railway rolling stock, $12,014,633; petroleum products, $11,058,020; printing and publishing $8,737,444; breweries, $6,359,259; printing and bookbinding, $4,417,145.

Sir John Simon, British Foreign Minister, Denies He Is Of Jewish Origin

Sir John Simon, British foreign minister, denied he is a Jew. Sir John wrote the denial to a correspondent who had drawn his attention to statements current in Britain and abroad that the foreign minister was of Jewish origin.

At the same time Sir John expressed hope his denial would not be distorted to make him appear sympathetic with anti-Semitism, an attitude he regards as "un-English" and which he "utterly condemns". The minister's correspondent had mentioned reports that Sir John's ancestry had powerfully influenced the national government since he became foreign minister.

Interesting Items Gleaned From Many Sources

There were 36,863 less hogs graded in Canada for the first six months in 1934 than in the corresponding period of 1933.

When salting cucumbers, a layer of dill and a handful of mixed spice may be placed on the bottom and top of the crock.

The cheaper cuts of beef should be used in making soup, both because of their low cost and because they come from those parts of the animal which are richest in extractives.

Bacon exports to the United Kingdom continue to make headway, and the movement to date this year is very far ahead of that for the corresponding period of last year.

On July 14, 1934, 15 geldings, 23 mares, 18 steers, 11 heifers, 6 cows, 6 bulls, 3 stallions, and 1 herder horse, all strays, were in the various official pounds of Alberta.

The British Crown colony of Trinidad and Tobago, with which Canada does an increasing trade, is the largest in area of any of the island colonies in the eastern group of the British West Indies.

A roast will brown more readily if sufficient flour is rubbed into the surface to make it dry. This also assists in preventing the seeping of the juices—Beef Bulletin, Dominion Department of Agriculture.

The demand for honey in all the principal countries of the world arises from three main sources: (1) from domestic consumers; (2) from various manufacturing trades, confectioners, bakers, chemists, etc., and from the catering trade.

According to the regulations governing fruit trading in Canada, the phrase "properly packed" means that apples, pears, plums, etc., are not slack in the receptacle, or over-pressed, or in a condition which is likely to result in permanent damage during handling or transit.

No fruit of any kind intended for sale shall be packed in any package other than the packages prescribed under the regulations of the Fruit and Honey Act, 1934, for each individual kind of fruit, except that where packages are not identified as for an individual kind of fruit, they may be used for any fruit.

For the month of June exports of cattle to the United Kingdom were approximately 500 head smaller than for June, 1933, the movement being affected by market conditions, but for the first seven months of this year the number of cattle exported to Great Britain exceeded last year's corresponding period by 1,343 head.

When honey from more than one person is included in one shipment under one inspection certificate, the person assuming responsibility for the shipment must place a designating mark, registered with the Dominion Minister of Agriculture, on all lots of honey included in the shipment, for the purpose of identifying the packer.

Attention has again been drawn by the Livestock and Meat Trade Review, published by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, to the evil of overloading the Monday livestock market. Such action is a direct snub to the law of supply and demand, and not among its least evils is that it largely affects cattle of a value least able to support marketing costs, adding further costs to the carryover.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt and Peter Anson, young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live in a small flat. Peter, who is a young, struggling sculptor, is to win a competition for a scholarship abroad and Camilla, the adopted daughter of a wealthy family, is not to inherit money when she comes of age and so is studying commercial art in the hope of finding an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Worth, another wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter, Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and Gus Matson, his former roommate with whom he has quarrelled. After a party at an exclusive club, when the rest of the members of the party go to a cabaret to continue the gaiety, Peter and Camilla slip off to the beach by themselves and fall asleep on the sand. When they awake it is early morning and Avis and another boy are standing near them. This makes it necessary for Camilla to announce before the party that she and Peter are married. Camilla urges Peter to accept some of her earnings to help him along, but Peter refuses and they quarrel. After Camilla has gone from the studio, Avis Worth calls and persuades Peter to accept a loan of $1,000. Peter finishes his exhibit and asks Avis and Camilla for suggestions on how to display it. Camilla suggests "Eager Youth," and Avis "Inspiration." Peter adopts the latter title and Camilla, heartily, goes to Peter's studio for quiet and to think. Peter and Avis follow later, and the lights are turned on, see the statue has been shattered to pieces. Avis accuses Camilla of doing this, and Camilla, stunned by the disaster, is hurt and horrified by the accusation, faints.

At Camilla's suggestion, Peter enters as his exhibit a statue he had sculptured especially for her as a wedding gift. They named it "Land of Hope." Camilla's advertising campaign and Tiny Tot broadcast was a great success, and Mrs. Hoyt, dressed in pleasure and surprise on learning that Camilla was the author and artist who was so ably stimulating business for his company.

Peter's exhibit was awarded the Paris scholarship, and he prepares for his journey to France.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER LXV

"I want you to be the very last person I see when the train leaves," Peter had told Camilla, when they planned for their last day together. They had dined festively at Chum Cottage, their happiness tempered with the ache of memories and the apprehension of the future. But, for Peter's sake, Camilla staunchly thrust aside her fears for what lay ahead and committed herself enthusiastically to this exquisite day of the moment. She scarcely took her eyes from Peter's sunny face, storing up in her mind a living picture of it to take out and look at often in the lonely year ahead.

They talked of trivial things, jested gaily, as if a throng of sadness did not accompany their thoughts. They lingered over their macaroni and demi tasse, as if it were not five short hours before they would part for one long year. They walked slowly in the crisp chill of the late autumn evening to Peter's dismantled studio in the Annex Building, as they had done on their wedding day four months before. It was then that Peter dropped his mask of cheerfulness and said wistfully, holding her in his arms with his face pressed to hers:

"I wish you might have gone to New York with me, at least, to see me two days more isn't so much out of a whole year," she consoled him. "And I think it might be even more difficult for both of us. When I see you leave on the train, I can try to make myself believe that you're not going far and won't be gone for long. But to watch a boat carry you down, down the river and over the horizon—" she sighed.

He crushed her close and her hand went up to caress his face. "If only you might go with me!"

"Which is impossible," she added, with a dull finality which left them both silent for awhile.

His trunk had gone, his Gladstone bag stood in readiness beside the door, like an object of evil taunting and challenging them from the shadow beyond the arc of light from the shaded lamp.

And then, with a sudden speeding up of time, they were at the station in the midst of the clamor of tears, shrieks, bells, voices, laughter. They were no longer Camilla and Peter Anson, wife and husband. They were separate entities, soon to go their separate ways, and confused for a few brief moments with the conflicting forces of humanity.

Camilla watched the gate man punch Peter's strip of ticket and tear it in half with the casual indifference of a doorman at the theatre tearing off the ticket stubs which gave you the privilege of being amused for a few hours. What a different significance the return of this half ticket had! It gave Peter the right to go to the other side of the world and stay away from her for a year.

She went with him into the Pullman car, found his berth—upper seven. "That's a lucky number to begin with, even if I am on the upper," he laughed. "But I shan't always take the way of least expense, you see. Some day, you and I will have a drawing room when we travel."

"Of course," she agreed.

"And you will try to come over in the spring?"

They had talked that over many times, but they flourished for things to say that would fortify their cheerfulness.

"Before we know it, your work will be going splendidly and we shall be writing about where and when you will meet me," she promised again.

The clamor outside increased, late arrivals followed hurrying porters into the car with their luggage.

Peter glanced at his watch for the tenth time. "Guess you will have to go, precious. I'll take you to the platform."

They single-filed through the side and corridor, descended to the platform.

"I'd take you into the station, but I don't dare. Can't afford to pay for another upper on the next train," his smile was strained.

"That's what I came to the train for, to see you off. I'll watch the train out of sight until the tail-light blinks feebly," her voice trembled a little in spite of her self.

"All aboard!" sang the porter.

Peter's eyes plunged down into hers and held them for a breathless moment. Their arms clung to each other and their lips lingered in a long kiss.

"Have to go, sweetheart," he murmured.

They parted reluctantly as the train began to move. Peter sprang onto the step, followed by the porter, and stood waving his hand as the train gathered speed. Camilla waved back, dashing the tears from her eyes so that she could see his face more clearly. Bright, bluish, brown and sunny smile blurred together, became a tall figure moving swiftly into the distance. The clicking rails echoed, hummed. And with a last jeering wink, a red light on the observation platform blinked out.

Camilla turned and walked back through the station, got into a taxicab and directed the driver to her apartment. She felt numb, lifeless, empty. Part of her had gone away.

Peter stood at the steamer rail, looking down into the sea of faces and the chaos of a pier at a ship's sailing. All the confusion of sounds and sights and odors swirled about him. He was detached, seeming to be no part of it, just watching with interest. He was thinking how different his landing in this great harbor must have been, almost a score of years before. He had arrived, frightened, bewildered, clinging to his mother's hand.

And now, by the results of the skill with which he had reproduced that occasion in clay, he was returning across the sea in honor; confident, serene, alone. For a moment, he wished that his mother might know what he had done. She always had talked to him of going "back home," yearned for it and begged him to go sometime, even if she could not. He would, he promised himself. It was possible that he would go to Stockholm from Paris before he returned to New York. But he could not plan definitely for that yet.

A bell clanged. Activity increased. People hurrying aboard and others hurrying ashore. Tears and laughter. Kisses, caresses. Sober faces, happy faces. Press photographers and reporters rushed to and fro. Women in smart clothes wearing bright corsages of flowers. To some of them, this sailing was an occasion of their lives; to others, it was just another tiresome departure.

Bells, shouts, running feet. The gangplank raised. Frantic waving of hands and calling farvels. The pier drawing away from the ship, the steamer, disappearing into the distance. Boats passing, tugs puffing about like distressed mother hens that had hatched ugly ducklings now turned into swans and didn't know what to do about them, freight-boats slipping by, the skyline of the city looking like a picture of towers and spires against a dull gray sky, dissolving in the fog.

The Statue of Liberty slipped by like a phantom in the mist, an hallucination that never had been real. And so these hundreds were returning whence they—or their ancestors—had come.

Peter stared down into the lacy foam of the disturbed water, recalling the stoic little smile on Camilla's face when it had receded into the distance at the station. He wished that he might have seen her again.

But perhaps it was just as well that she had not come to New York with him. It would have meant for her a lonely journey back.

But, he resolved, there was nothing to be gained by yearning for Camilla, now. He had to right-about-face and make the best of what was ahead of him. As if the act would follow the thought, he turned about and walked down the deck toward his stateroom.

But to be settled for the week, and perhaps he could get some work done.

The days would be long and lonely even if he were friendly with his fellow passengers. He might have made the passage in five days on a faster steamer, but again, he had to consider the cost—tourist deck, inner stateroom on a slow boat.

As he turned into the corridor, he wondered suddenly if he were already seasick and perhaps even delirious. A strange sensation engulfed him and he put up his hand over his eyes with a vague gesture, as if he were seeing a vision.

There, facing him in the passage, was Avis Worth.

Grilled Or Fried

He examined the menu carefully and then tossed it irritably on the table.

"Waiter," he called, "is this all you have to-day?"

"Yes, sir," said the waiter, whose term of service expired at the end of the week.

"Why, there's nothing on the menu fit to eat—absolutely nothing," said the diner. "Bring me the manager!"

The waiter smiled.

"Very good, sir," he said. "How would you like him—grilled or fried?"

Search For Treasure

Young Englishman To Explore Lost City Of Sheba

In search of treasure hidden in the mysterious lost city of Sheba, once ruled by the glamorous queen, a young Londoner of 22 is setting out on a lone trek into the Arabian desert.

He is Norman Stone Penn, who has recently returned from a 2,000-mile camel expedition across the Sahara.

Millions in gold, silver and precious stones, are believed to be hidden beneath the shifting sands which wiped the great city of Sheba from man's ken over 2,000 years ago.

"It is going to be a difficult trip with lots of risks," said Mr. Penn. "The Arabian desert is one of the hottest places in the world, and one may die of thirst there in 24 hours. Pierce brigands lurk in its wastes, and lost trails mean almost certain death."

"Years ago Sheba was the centre of the trading routes across Arabia. In the reign of the great queen it was a city of luxury."

"At the death of the queen the city began to decline. It became overrun with thieves and brigands, and traders avoided it until Sheba became a forgotten city and the desert sands gradually obliterated it."

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

OF JOY

Though sometimes long I woo it, This joy beloved of all,

It may not breed my pleading Or answer to my call.

Then, like a swift wind veering, Its touch is on my life,

More light than breeze-tossed petals Yet keener than a knife.

I never see it coming, I know not where it goes;

Though with me, it is fragrant And vivid as a rose.

It sends me no forerunner To say when it will start,

And all I know of joy Is its singing in my heart.

A Port For Freighters

Reason Liverpool Could Afford To Build Mersey Tunnel

Liverpool, which has just inaugurated the longest under-river tunnel in the world, was once a greater name in the world than it is now.

But it is still a great name in the world than it is in the United States. For us it grew dim when Liverpool was supplanted by Southampton as the terminus for the crack Atlantic liners. The principal occupation which Liverpool now engages in is the news is laid in March, every year, with the running of the Grand National Steeplechase. Otherwise it is the general impression here that decay has come upon the once great seaport on the Mersey.

A moribund community would hardly trust itself to a new $40,000,000 submarine tunnel. Liverpool, as a matter of fact, is still the second port in Great Britain, next only to London.

It is true that Southampton 25 years ago had only one-fourth of Liverpool's tonnage and now has three fourths, but Liverpool's ocean trade is still worth five times that of its rival. The de luxe passenger liners go to Southampton.

Freighters go to Liverpool. That is why the city can afford the great Mersey tunnel and the magnificent new Liverpool Cathedral.

Made His Own Place

Prince Of Wales Has Endeavored Himself To People

It is one of the many practical advantages of King over President that there is no sharp break of personalities. The people learn to know and love the son while the father reigns, and love for the one confirms the other in a humane and natural succession. Our Prince, however, is not merely deputy to our King; he has made for himself his own interests and his own sphere of work.

The unemployed have learnt from him the Royal soliloquy; the Social Service League, which he founded, seeks to fill their vacant hours and to give them, where work cannot be found, least occupation. The cobbling of shoes, the planting of gardens, the making of simple furniture, even the building of houses—such useful arts have given new hope and new interests, in many cases, to the lives of the unemployed.

The State may maintain the workless in life; but it requires the Royal touch to add something of cheerfulness and humanity.—London Morning Post.

Britain's Hall Of Records

Girl Wanting Job There Has To Pass Difficult Tests

If a girl wants a job at Somerset House, Britain's hall of records, she must be able to:

Describe the changes in a frog's egg from the time of deposition to the time of hatching and give some indication of the duration of this period of the frog's life from her own observations.

She would then be considered fit to levy surtax.

On the other hand, if she can: Give a concise account of the respiratory organs of a mammal she would probably be considered an expert on death duties.

These are but two of the questions in the examinations for posts at Somerset House.

Women for these jobs—which carry a salary of $5,000 a year—are recruited from the stars of girls' public schools.

The following specimen questions are included in the examinations:

Explain how your muscular and nervous systems will enable you to write the answers to this examination.

Describe the morphology of the tadpole at the stage when it most nearly resembles a fish and indicate the essential points of similarity and difference.

India To Pay Homage

Princes To Attend Silver Jubilee Of King George's Accession

Fifty elephant all gorgeously decorated; the famous "South of India Star Diamond"; 30 yard ropes of pearls—these are a few symbols of the glamor of the east which India will send to London next May, when some of her former native princes will come to celebrate the silver jubilee of the King's accession.

The 50 elephants, wearing jewels belonging to the 27 chief maharajahs, are to take part in a brilliant procession in London's streets.

It is reported also that a court fair begun by her former native princes will come to London to pronounce his blessing on Their Majesties.

The famous diamond, the "South of India Star," second only in importance to the Kohinoor, will be worn in his turban by the Kakwar of Emdra during the ceremonies; and the Maharajah Sindhis of Gwalior will wear his magnificent state robes with ropes of pearls amounting to 30 yards in length.

Emeralds and other jewels said to be worth $500,000 will be worn by the Maharajah of Patiala.

Little Helps For This Week

"Beloved let us love one another, for love is of God, and everyone that loveth is born of God and knoweth God." 1 John 4:7.

So to the calmly gathered thought. The innermost of life is taught. The mystery, dimly understood, That love of God is love of good; That to be saved is only this, Salvation from our selfishness.

—J. G. Whittier.

The Spirit of Love, wherever it is, is its own blessing and happiness, because it is the truth and reality of God in the soul, and therefore is the same good to itself everywhere and on every occasion. Would you know the blessing of all blessings? It is this God of Love dwelling in your soul and killing every root of bitterness which is the pain and torment of every creature's selfish love. For all wants are satisfied, all disorders of nature are removed, no life is any longer a burden, every day is a day of peace, everything you meet becomes a help to you, because everything you see or do is all done in the sweet element of Love.—William Law.

Codex Reveals Changes

Errors Have Been Made In Copying The Bible

Remarkable changes have been made in copying the Bible are revealed by the Sinai Codex, according to Dr. Percy Dearmer. While preaching recently in Westminster Abbey he said:

"The Codex shows that the full name of the robber who was released was Jesus Barabbas; and the awkwardness of his having the same name as Christ proves that here we are on the border of history. The copyists soon left out the word, not realizing its critical importance." The Bible version is (St. Matt. ch. xxvii, v. 17): Pilate said . . . "Whom will ye that I release unto you? Barabbas, or Jesus which is called Christ?"

Even more important is the fact that Christ did not say, "He that believeth not shall be damned."

Cattle Slaughter In U. S. Underway

1,000,000 Already Killed & 850,000 More Already Bought To Be Disposed Of CHICAGO, Aug 9.—The U. S. government, Wednesday, was in the midst of a cattle slaughter program that may accomplish in a few months some of the things economists advocated last spring. Expedited by a rag and water shortage, the wholesale killing of beef and dairy cattle, besides giving meat to the needy, may erase one of the livestock industry's major problems—the steady increase of the cattle population, now about the United States total human population.

With 1,000,000 emaciated cattle already dead under the government axe of mercy, 850,000 bought up ready for slaughter and about 150,000 shipped to pastures in southern states, tentative plans call for the purchase of approximately 3,000,000 more before federal agents consider the acute situation relieved.

Government slaughter of 7,000,000 starving and diseased cattle, should it reach that figure, would equal about one third of the total normal annual cattle killed in the United States.

THE OLD T MODEL FORD

(By "Ferg. James")
Twenty years and what a difference in the automobile trend. Since we first made our acquaintance with the old T model friend. When Mr. Damb, he drove her home And holed "all aboard!" And the whole Damb family scrambled in To the old T model Ford.

Then Mrs. Damb, she drove it And also K. B. Damb. And Helen Damb sat stylish As the doors she'd gently slam. And I. B. Damb with whiskers on. Sat on the running board When they had that snapshot taken Of the old T model Ford.

Now that old car gave service When the roads were rough as sin. But they killed some cows and chickens. When they went out for a spin. And the neighbors said that Damb car Is a nuisance; how they roared! But they all saved up their shekels For an old T model Ford.

And soon the country swarmed with them. Folks drove them everywhere. Away to church on Sundays Up to the country fair. They took the young men's fancy And dressed up like a lord. They took their sweethearts driving In the old T model Ford.

For twenty years these old cars Have surely done their stuff. Although the tin is rusty And the engines snort and puff. They show the signs of aging Which cannot be ignored. Now they're trying to rejuvenate The old T model Ford.

Yes, they're taking them asunder To the chassis hitch a team. They are hauling out provisions And are bringing in the cream. The engine used for power. Cutting stove wood by the cord—Just another useful purpose For the old T model Ford.

Some call them Bennett buggies And depression limousines—They haul anything, from bootleg booze

To sacks of corn and beans. They're a cross between an auto And a pioneer buck board—Just the natural evolution Of the old T model Ford.

Now young Damb went out to start his. When the ground was white with snow. He blistered both hands cranking. Then he cursed her down below. But the flicker of the man lights And the rattle of the tin. Just drive the devil crazy. So he turned her loose again.

And now she's back in Hanna. And she hauls the Royal mail. The engine starts a-purrin' Every time you twist her tail. She's on her good behavior Since the hot place she endured. And is keeping in the record Of the old T model Ford.

The model A's and V's Stand for speed in a mode. They'll dust sixty miles an hour On any decent road. But since fickle fame and fortune Have passed me by the board, I'll go chuggin' down the highway In my old T model Ford.

HOME-GROWN GRAIN FOR SHEEP

The solution to the problem of economical sheep feeding in winter rests on the use of good palatable roughages, properly supplemented with grains.

The grain part of the ration is usually the most expensive; however, with a reasonable supply of home-grown grains such as satisfactory results can be obtained.

Some grain is generally required for the maintenance of the ewe in lamb. For this purpose oats have no equal. However, if no legume hay is available, wheat bran should be added to the oats in the proportion of one part of the former to two of the latter. The amount to be fed will vary from one-quarter of a pound to three-quarters of a pound per head daily according to the condition of the animals.

For fattening lambs, Canadian farmers have in barley and wheat two good substitutes for corn. Feeding trials in United States have proved that these grains have a value almost equal to corn. A review made by the Animal Husbandry Division of the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, of the work done by Canadian Stations confirms this point. For instance at the La Prairie Experimental Station, barley was found as valuable as corn when one part was fed with a mixture of ground oats 2 parts, bran 2 parts and oil meal, one part. The lambs made good gains and were well finished. A report from the Lethbridge Experimental Station in Alberta indicates that with alfalfa hay, a mixture of barley and oats or wheat and oats in the proportion of two to one has resulted in excellent gains and good finished lambs at the end of the trial.

These grains contain starch and consequently should be fed with legume hay if best results are to be obtained. A half and half or a two to one mixture of barley and oats is to be recommended in this connection.

With non-leguminous roughages such as mixed hay, low-land hay etc. bran or oil meal should be added. Two parts of oats two parts of barley or wheat, one part of bran or one-half part of oil meal constitute a good mixture.

Care must be taken that these grains are not too finely ground. Sheep like something to chew and finely ground barley or wheat are apt to form a sticky mass in the mouth. It is, therefore, recommended to feed these grains whole, rolled or coarsely ground. They will be eaten more readily and at the same time the cost of grinding will be reduced.—P. F. Wheat can be substituted for barley in the same proportion. Sylvester, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

THE CLUB SPEAKER

When you club invites a speaker to address it, there are certain courtesies which are due to him, and which are frequently overlooked. The speaker should be definitely informed as to the time and place of the meeting, the size and nature of the audience to expect, the time allotted for his address, the topic on which he is to speak, what arrangements are to be made for his transportation to and from the meeting and whether the club will pay his expenses or a fee for the speaking. If money is to be paid to him, the check should be ready and given to him with as little ceremony as possible. A speaker appreciates a note of thanks after he has appeared on a program.

One mistake which clubs sometimes make is to plan a program so full that the speaker, who has come from a distance, at perhaps great inconvenience, does not have time to get his message across. At a club meeting at which an outside speaker has been invited, the business should be omitted or brief, and ample time be given to the speaker. It is a mistake to invite two important speakers to one meeting, which either one could occupy fully; and it is a discourtesy to bring in a speaker and then not give him a creditable audience to hear what he has to say.

The Curse of Plenty

By J. J. Jackson

Did the Gods ever dream of a system employed Where so much is produced and so little enjoyed, Why those who labor get naught for their toil For the harvest of plenty they wrest from the soil? The produce is cursed with the midas touch Cannot be used be it little or much Did the Gods ever think that man was so vain To uphold such a system with its midasian pain?

Mr. and Mrs. Howard and family, of Munson, spent the week end at the home of Mrs. Guss. On their return, Mrs. Guss and Annis accompanied them to Munson.
